Diasporic Trajectories: Transnational Cultures in the 21st Century

Diaspora studies is a growing area of research within the broader field of postcolonial studies. Its principal focus is the ways in which the experiences of migrant and displaced communities have been represented in thought, literature and art.

With the aim of encouraging underexplored comparative perspectives this seminar series will probe diaspora-related themes in a diverse range of ways. There will be two papers at each seminar, separated by a coffee break. All welcome!

Seminar Three

Prof. John McLeod, ‘Transcultural Adoption and Diasporic Writing’

Prof. Françoise Král, ‘Diasporising neo-imperial languages: towards a pragmatics of global (mis)understanding’

Friday 16 October 2015, 2 - 5pm
IASH, 2 Hope Road, University of Edinburgh
